

Your Stories

Preserving local histories for our tamariki

Help to create a gift for the future

The Preserving Local History and Educational Trust wishes to preserve the stories that have helped to shape our communities and our nation, and to make these accessible to all.

This project is called Your Stories, and its goal is to digitise, and make available, all historic newspapers published in New Zealand (from 1840 to 2000). This will ensure that the stories and histories from diverse communities across urban and rural New Zealand are preserved for current and future generations.

The digitised images are then held with The Trust's Strategic Partner, the National Library, to be stored in the National Digital Heritage Archive, and accessible via the Papers Past website.

We have already preserved 200,000 pages from Otago, Marlborough, Central Plateau and North Shore, Auckland. However, the only way to complete the project will be in partnership with generous benefactors, donors and sponsors.

We invite you to join us in enabling this project to be completed. This is an opportunity to make a very meaningful, one-off, intergenerational gift that will transform the lives of millions of people now, and in the future.

Together, we can create an important gift for the future.
